Dear Dan,

Thank you for your follow-up to help me make time in my schedule to receive a bodywork session from you. Not only was it a great massage, it heightened my awareness to help improve my communication and influence skills. An excellent investment.

My schedule is fast paced, demanding, and I constantly travel. The intensity of my personal standards is why I earned the award as the #1 sales professional, top revenue producer, in 1997 for Anthony Robbin's COMPETITIVE EDGE event.

During your session, I accessed a deep inner connection that controls a wide range of emotions and integrates them with the intense, powerful qualities of my training sessions. Building more emotional connection is the key to a successful speaking career. The deeper I connect with myself emotionally, the better I connect emotionally with my audience and move them to action more elegantly.

In this context, your bodywork was a fantastic experience. After the session, I felt strong and powerful, centered and connected, relaxed and grounded. I felt phenomenal.

That evening, I slept really well and awoke refreshed, sharp and clear. While doing my mourning Power Moves, I realized that my breathing was more expansive and powerful. This helped maximize my energy and focus during the day, as one small element is so important to my daily performance. This powerful breath was absent for the past couple months and may have effected my overall performance. Good to have it back!

I'm impressed that one bodywork session could help open the door for me to go to the next level. It makes sense that when I access and utilize all elements of my mental, emotional and physical communication, I am more influential.

As my career continues to expand nationally, I'd love to fly you around the country to my speaking and training engagements to receive regular bodywork sessions from you.

Summarily, in order to affect people emotionally, we must be emotionally effected.

Much Success,
